Hog Report – Pre Season Primer

This is the official newsletter of the SFFL. The articles contained hereof probably contain misspelled words, poor grammar, and bad humor. It is not our responsibility to check the accuracy of the information reported.

SFFL Franchise SOLD!

(Courtesy of Reuter News) The biggest story to hit the league is the continuing saga of the Flea Flickers club. The franchise started in 2002, the inaugural season of the SFFL, and played by the name of El Brewski. After a dismal 4-8 season, the club changed hands in 2003 and became know as the Flea Flickers. The team finished poorly in each year going 3-9 (2003), 4-10 (2004), and 3-11 (2005). The franchise went back on the block again this past off season. Supreme SFEA athlete, Greg Rueter, acquired the club on Ebay. Here's to hoping our new owner can turn this team's fortunes around.

Whoa, whoa, whoa, changes

(Courtesy of Beat Rider) Things happen in the off season, some good some bad. This past year was full of league news and happenings. As a result, the landscape of the league has changed dramatically. Here's a rundown of the predicted new team names to reflect the happenings...

H4 Explosives – This one's obvious. The change was necessitated by the move from C4 to H4. This explosive team is owned by the Supreme Ruler Augie. I cheer for anyone each week who plays Hennings! Go Augie!

West Lafayette Soldiers – Another obvious one. It was too late to officially make the change last year by draft time. Spencer plans to finish up boot camp by draft time. Hey Matt, how's baseball going? Go Buffs!

Falcon Necessities – The Bear Necessities send #4 rated RB Tiki Barber to the Southsiders for #13 QB Michael Vick. Not a bad trade, if Tiki Barber breaks his leg! Butch will have an excellent draft and win the C division.

Widowkeepers – After failing miserably during the draft last year, Hennings resurrects himself by the end of last season by acquiring keepers for '06. Mike will be found on draft night wearing water wings in the hot tub.

Waterheaters – Speaking of last year's draft, the Southsiders spent more time out of the draft room than in the draft room. Cunningham has got the plumbing fixed and plans to attend the entire draft!

DT-Engagedher – If you've missed this story it was plastered all over the Pantagraph about two months ago. Congrats DT! I sure hope your honey doesn't have too many to-do lists on Sunday afternoons.

Bud Hole – Rumor has it that Boden is playing in two leagues this year. The other league is sponsored by Budweiser. Good ole Blackcat will probably walk under a ladder, step on a crack, and break a mirror.

Peace Pigs – After last year's forgettable season, the War Pigs will try a gentler approach this year. He's got to try something, twenty-six years old and getting embarrassed by men twice his age. Go War Pigs!

Pigswin – The returning champs plans to finish respectfully again amidst the tough opponents in the superior Doomsday division. Henning's is a big preseason target, but hey I won last year (gulp).

P-Squared – The P-Cubed franchise finished 2nd last year. What other way to commemorate a team for a job well done than to rename the team appropriately. Look for Schumann to have a repeat performance this year.

Army of One – The Roughriders, led by Roosevelt, were ill-prepared for battle back in 1898. Not this year. Colonel Roosevelt plans to recruit and enlist only straight men. No more volunteer army! Go get 'em Rough Riders!

Roto Rooter – Just a guess on my part. His last name is Rueter, what else could I think of? Greg brings a wealth of experience from other fantasy leagues he's played in, at least that's what Augie says. Good luck new guy!

Our SFFL Pre Season Favorite...

I asked two people and it was unanimous!

Widowmakers

DT says he'll finish 2nd.
