

Hog Report®

Oink, oink, snort... here comes the Hog Report®.

Hog Of The Week

The Hog Of The Week award goes to Frank Gore... I mean the Buffalo Soldiers! It was 2004 that Spencer last won the SFFL championship. Could this be Matt's year? Could this become an every other year type of thing? Not if the Widowmaker has his say. What about DT? Personally, I think this is the most balanced league we've had in a long time. This could be the year of the wildcard. Back to Matt, he had a great week. Congratulations! Good luck next week.

What The Heck Happened?

Week 1

	91	58
--	-----------	-----------	--

Balanced scoring carried the Buffs past the Rough Riders. Vanderjagt (groin) did not play, but would have needed to kick 11 field goals for a tie. What's the deal with Randy Moss? I think that head band he wears is compressing his brain. He looks like he's lost. Donovan McNabb is a better QB without TO. Go figure.

	89	60
---	-----------	-----------	---

On paper you'd expect Alexander to score more and the Carolina defense to be better. Instead you get 6 field goals by Wilkens, the breakout of Donte Stallworth, and the return of the great 2002 Ravens defense (3 $1 players). Pigskins pick up where they left off last season. The Blackcats are just as unlucky as ever.

	82	79
---	-----------	-----------	---

The Teasers took a flyer on Frank Gore last year, and now he appears to be a fantasy stud. The multi-talented back had 16 carries for 87 yards, 2 touchdowns, and 6 catches for 83 yards. New owner Greg Rueter made a nice debut losing by only 3 points to the preseason runner-up favorite. Something tells me that Cedric Benson will work his way into the starting lineup. Sorry Brad.

	81	64
---	-----------	-----------	---

Speaking of Brad ... 2005 SFFL runner-up P-Cubed continues his winning ways. Westbrook had a day and Fragile Freddie is still churning out fantasy yards. The War Pigs running back by committee approach yielded no TD's. Drew mentioned at the draft that he sometimes has the worst fantasy luck. Drew meet Blackcat.

	79	62
---	-----------	-----------	---

The unanimous preseason favorite mustered just enough fantasy points to be the 5th highest scoring team of the week. I doubt Hennings keepers will continue to perform yardage wise as poorly as they did last Sunday; Brown 62 yards, Cadillac 47 yards. The Southsiders fortunes will be closely tied to the success of the Baltimore Ravens this year (McNair, Mason, Lewis). Look for Hennings to bust a hundred plus points this weekend ... against the Blackcats!

	68	58
---	-----------	-----------	---

The team name clearly sucks, but LT helps H4 get past the Vickless wonders. Tampa Bay was really bad this past week and that affected Butch's team. Joey Galloway had no completions, three targets, and one dropped pass. Chris Simms was sacked three times, had four passes batted down, and three passes dropped by open receivers. Let's see if LT can carry H4 all season.

Visit the HOG Report® archives at <http://www.afsn.net/football/2006/sffl/index.html>

"I believe, at the end of the day, personally, my life is not about a banana," Maria Sharapova