Up In Smoke

Travis “Cannibis” Henry's long-term future does not look good as it's clear that he reportedly provided a drug test sample that came back positive (the drug is allegedly marijuana). Unless his case gets thrown out, he will eventually be suspended.

Henry reportedly failed a drug test in late September but is disputing the test results because of a technicality in the testing process in court

Weed-O-Maker roach, Mike Hennings, is under scrutiny

Investigative officials can look back to as recently as 2005 when Ricky Williams was on the Widowmakers roster.

Reading between the lines of this year's roster; one has got to wonder...

RB – Travis “Cannibis” Henry

RB – Rudi “Doobie” Johnson

RB - Earnest Gram

RB - Michael Potman

WR - Vincent Jointson

K - Stoner Gostowski

K - Jeff Weed

We all know that the legal process moves slow, so this thing could be dragged out for a while. Until it's settled, Henry will continue to play. But make no mistake about it, the Widowmakers will most likely be without their stud running back at some point this year.

Pardon The Interruption

If you were watching MNF last night you learned that Grandpa Joe from the cult classic “Willie Wonka and The Chocolate Factory” will replace Tony Kornheiser.

Grandpa Joe worked for Wonka for five years, beginning when Wonka opened his first candy shop, until the day he closed his shop and fired all his workers from his factory.

Wonka’s Grandpa Joe holds the golden ticket

Years later, the factory started running again, secretly staffed exclusively by Oompa Loompas, a race of dwarves from Loompaland who relish the taste of cacao beans.

TESTIMONIAL: “I just wanted you guys to know that my FATHEAD is the bomb! I was excited to get it but once I put it up I was blown away! One of the best purchases that I have ever made. I am such a huge sports fan... These things totally give that awe factor. Thanks again!” - Mike Hennings, Bloomington, IL
